Life in Chile

Life in Chile

Welcome to Santiago! We know you must be excited about beginning your adventure in Chile's capital and eager to prepare for your arrival. We have put together some basic health information with tips to help you stay healthy and safe during your semester here. We want to ensure that you have the best study abroad experience possible.

Water: The tap water in Chile is potable, but like in any other country, it may take time to acclimate your body to the different levels of chlorine and other chemicals that they use to clean it. The majority of people have no problem, but we suggest that you start with drinking only bottled water and slowly introduce the tap water.

Fruits and vegetables: Fresh produce is abundant and cheaply available all-year round in Santiago. Be sure to wash vegetables thoroughly, to remove the dust and pollution before you eat them.

Mobile phones: As an exchange student at FEN it is compulsory that you have a Chilean phone number so that we can contact you in emergencies. Pre-paid phones are both efficient and affordable. They can be bought in most Malls, large supermarkets and company stores. The three main telephone companies are Entel, Movistar and Claro. Entel has an emergency feature that allows you to borrow money to make a call, or send an emergency text message to another number requesting they call you, if necessary. Other companies may have similar features so do ask when you are shopping. Alternatively, bring an unblocked invaluable phone with you, and purchase a Chilean sim card to use with it.

Street food: Food vendors can be found on most street corners and in the ferias, or markets. Be extra cautious if consuming food or drinks sold on the street.

Street safety: In Santiago, like in any big city, it is important to be aware of your valuables. Be careful about using your phone or other electronic devices in the street and always have a firm grip on your bag and backpack.

While on the metro, especially during rush hour, be sure to carry your backpack in front of you and to ensure all pockets are well closed. Mobile phones and other electronics should be put away securely, not in the outside pockets of your coat, bag or backpack.

In general, it is best to leave your more flashy jewelry and accessories at home when spending the day in the street or in certain neighborhoods. Further information about keeping safe in Santiago will be given on Student Orientation Day.

While eating at a restaurant, especially if it is an outside patio, be sure to leave your bags and backpacks tied to the chair next to you or firmly in between your legs.

In the event that you are pick-pocketed, please go to the nearest Comisaría de Carabineros (Police Station) or Retén Móvil (Mobile Police Station) to report the incident.

- Emergencies: In case of emergencies, go to your nearest hospital (see section on Hospital Locations) or local Health Care Center (consultorio). Request receipts if you plan to be excused from classes, or get reimbursed by your insurance company.

Housing

This guide provides contacts for different kinds of living arrangements: Host Families, Shared Apartments (Departamentos compartidos), Residencies/Boarding Houses (Residencias), and Rooms (Habitaciones). The following pages contain the housing details and contact information for each house/apartment situation available.

Between these contacts and the list of housing websites on the next page, you should have no trouble finding housing either before you arrive in Santiago, or when you arrive in person.

Things to consider when looking for housing in Santiago

- Location

Think about how long you would like your commute to be and calculate the route using maps. Santiago has a good public transport system but the metro is very busy during peak times. A long commute can have an effect on how much you enjoy your semester. Consider the map below to avoid protest hotspots and to choose a safer commute to FEN:

- Climate

Santiago has cold winters with average temperatures of 9°C in July. Most properties do not have central heating and can be very cold inside during winter. Check what the policy is for using electric and gas heaters in your property as many property owners charge extra for their use or even prohibit it.

- Try before you buy

- 6 We recommend where possible to visit accommodation before confirming and/or paying any money to the property owners. Check out the list of hostels used by previous students (page 24) for places to base yourself whilst viewing properties. The student accommodation Liviin also offer hostel-style weekly rentals for students who wish to visit accommodation during their first weeks.
